WARNING! This book may be hazardous to your traditional beliefs.

This study tackles the problem of the widely disparate doctrinal views found among the diverse Christian denominations and sects. The author analyzes some of the key conflicting issues by applying the filter of the Old and New Testament scriptures. In the process, the answer to the all-important question, "What must I do to be saved?" is clearly and thoroughly documented including an in-depth study of the "new birth" experience. The concern for the eternal fate of aborted babies and of the multitudes who have lived and died without a chance to hear the gospel is also addressed. At the same time, some popular doctrines are challenged including the traditional Sunday day of worship, the Good Friday crucifixion, Sunday resurrection, the immortal soul, the state of the dead and the importance of God's sacred name. This book may not appeal to those who fail to believe that both the Old and New Testament scriptures are the divinely revealed word of the Living God. To those who do believe, it is hoped that it will trigger a desire to follow the example of the noble Bereans who,..."received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily to see whether those things were so"(Acts 17:11).

WILLIAM A. (Bo) GRISSOM holds a PhD in mechanical engineering from the University of Cincinnati and is professor emeritus at Central State University in southwestern Ohio, where he taught for thirty years before retiring in 2006. He spent most of his career in engineering education and was a licensed professional engineer for 35 years. At Central State University he played a key role in the establishment of the Manufacturing Engineering Department, where he served as chair and directed a robust undergraduate research program in the areas of computer-integrated-manufacturing, robotics, composite materials, and machine vision. Research sponsors included the U.S. Air Force Manufacturing Technology Laboratory, NASA, Jet Propulsion Laboratory, U.S. Army Research Office, U.S. Defense Logistics Agency, Federal Aviation Administration, and the Office of Naval Research. Dr. Grissom's industrial experience included assignments with IBM, GE, NASA Lewis (now NASA Glenn), the Baldwin Piano Company and the Chrysler Corporation. In 1999 Dr. Grissom received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the University of Cincinnati, College of Engineering. In this book, he has attempted to apply the same logical, detailed approach to Bible study as is required in the field of engineering. Dr. Grissom and his wife, Sandi, whom he married in 1972, reside in Xenia, Ohio and have been blessed with six grown children.
